WELCOME TO SAND HARBOR

With 55 acres of long sandy beaches, rocky coves, shady forested areas and panoramic lake views, Sand Harbor offers visitors unparalleled opportunities to enjoy Lake Tahoe.

Harbor History

The resources of Tahoe's east shore were prized by Native Americans long before Europeans made their discovery of the lake. The Washo Tribe spent summers at Sand Harbor fishing, hunting and gathering.

By the early 1880s, lumber baron Walter Scott Hobart had established operations for the Sierra Nevada Wood & Lumber Company at Sand Harbor. Cut timbers from around the lake were towed into the harbor behind the Steamship Niagara, then sent by railway car to the SNW&L Co. sawmill in Incline. Towards the end of the 19th century, timber along the east lakeshore became scarce and the operation was moved to Truckee.

Following the death of his father in 1892, Walter Scott Hobart Jr. inherited his family's wealth and land holdings. He exhausted much of his acquired fortune on a lavish summer resort along the shores of Sand Harbor. Hobart entertained Hollywood royalty and the social elite aboard his yacht, the Quic Chakidn, until it was commandeered by the U.S. Navy during WWII.

In the early 1920s, Hobart leased the resort's master cottage to Frank W. Fuller, Vice President of the W.P. Fuller & Company paint firm. His son, Frank Jr., and family, enjoyed summers at the harbor until 1966. Fuller Jr. had a passion for flying and moored his Gruman Goose seaplane, and Gruman Mallard, on the shores of Sand Harbor.

George Whittell Jr. moved his inherited fortune to Nevada in the early 1930s and set out to purchase most of the east side of Lake Tahoe. His holdings included Sand Harbor, where he planned to build a casino. Between 1936 and 1939 Whittell focused on the construction of his own magnificent summer estate, the Thunderbird Lodge, and as years passed, the reclusive millionaire abandoned his other development plans.

In 1958, Whittell reluctantly leased a portion of his lakeshore property at Sand Harbor to the State of Nevada for public use. He eventually sold 5,000 acres to the state which became the foundation for Lake Tahoe Nevada State Park.

FACILITIES AND FEATURES

VISITOR CENTER: The Sand Harbor visitor center and gift shop is available for self-guided tours with informative displays and regional information. A snack bar and grill concession offers snacks and drinks on a relaxing, shady deck.

SWIMMING AND SCUBA DIVING: Gently sloping beaches, crystal-clear water and interesting rock formations allow for wonderful swimming and scuba diving. Beach Patrol is on duty from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

PICNICKING: Located in the shade of the cedars and Jeffrey pines, the picnic area offers a peaceful retreat from the busy beaches. Each site is equipped with a barbecue and picnic table. Paved walkways make the area accessible to persons with disabilities.

SAND HARBOR TO MEMORIAL POINT TRAIL: The short, half-mile trail offers a link to Memorial Point and provides access to many secluded beach and rock areas.

SAND POINT NATURE TRAIL: The one-third-mile Sand Point Nature Trail is a handicap-accessible trail with interpretive signs and breathtaking views of Lake Tahoe.

GROUP AREA/RAMADA: A group-use area set on a pine-dotted, rocky point accommodates groups of up to 100 people. The covered facility is equipped with electricity, water and tables and includes a large barbecue. Use is by reservation only.

BOATING: The boat launch includes two wave protected double ramps with docks and adjacent parking. Parking fills to capacity early on summer weekends. Watercraft inspections are required as part of the new program that is helping to protect Lake Tahoe from the threat of aquatic invasive species such as Quagga and Zebra mussels.

LAKE TAHOE SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL: During July and August, the Lake Tahoe Shakespeare Festival at Sand Harbor offers the Bard's best plays set against the awe-inspiring backdrop of Lake Tahoe.

REMINDERS

Please join the majority of park visitors in keeping Sand Harbor safe and clean by observing the following:
